

IAPOP CONFERENCE 2012

GLOBAL BURN-OUT? Conflict, Crisis and Change

28th-30th April 2012 in Zürich

A forum for exchanging sustainable methods for working with the challenges ahead.

International Association of Process
Oriented Psychology

We are all affected by the current economic crises, conflicts and upheaval of our rapidly-changing world. The certainties of yesterday are already overturned. Addressing these challenges will need new perspectives, tools and networking with others.

For 3 days, some of the world's leading practitioners of working with social tensions will come together in Zürich. Synergies arising from the diversity of experience and techniques - both of speakers and of participants - will forge the heart of the conference, with over 30 keynote speeches and interactive workshops.

The three days offer:

- Insight into new ways of working with social tensions.
- Practical tools for working with conflict and challenging relationship situations.
- Future strategies for addressing the issues of our time, seen from psychological, economic and political perspectives.
- An opportunity to reflect on your own work and attitudes through engaging in interactive workshops.
- Inspiring exchanges with others from the fields of organisational development, human resources and conflict work.

Sustainable methods will be shown for:

- harnessing the potential for change within disturbances
- facilitating linear and non-linear processes
- finding keys to surprising ways through tension and disturbance
- understanding conflict in teams and management as a step towards greater cohesion
